YALE BOYS STORM THEATER IN RIOT

Object to Cutting Short of Gaby Deslys' Programme.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18 .- Yale students, including some of the Yale football team, started a riot at the Hyperion Theater to-night, where Gaby perion Theater to night, where Gaby the students ran on the stage, chased the members of the company to their dressing rooms, and were only driven off when the stage hands and generally grecked the orchestra. Crow bars and other weapons were selxed by the students and stage hands, and as a result a number of students and others were hurt, some of them seriously. Louis E. Bomeisler, brother of the Yale football end, was among those injured, and with a number of other students, was arrested by a squad of polkemen who responded to a riot call.

Among the sindents arrested were Norman V. Reed and Samuel A. Dyer, of the football squad. Others arrested were:
Charles H. Rider. Lonis Connick, John E. Degert, and W. J. Burns, jr.
Sympathizers with the students gathered in front of Vanderbilt dormitory, across the street from the theater, after their ejection and began a fusiliade of sicks and stones, some of which crashed through the windows of the theater and other business houses in the vicinity. The men arrested were rushed to police head-quarters, where all were locked up on charges of breach of the peace and interference with the officers. Several of them were released on bonds.

Meantime Mile. Deslys was able to make her way from the theater to a carriage under guard of the police, and went to the station, where she boarded a train out of the city.

Bomeisler, Dyer, and Reed were all bloody from coming in contact with the citibs of the police and their wounds were dremsed by physicians at police head-quarters.

Yaan Shih Kai, the new premier, who was hailed as his country's savior, is already the object of criticism. It is openly charged that he is under the thumb of Prince Ching, the ex-premier. His cabinet is proving a failure before the completion of its organization. Liang Tung Yon, named as president of the board of foreign affairs, is among those selected, but has refused to serve. The native newspapers denounce the new premier's policy in bitter terms. It is said that he cannot see beyond the Chi-Liprovince.

The situation in the Yangste section remains unchanged and uncertain, Fighting continued at many places in the district to-day. The 500,000 yen for which the governor of Ho-Nan telegraphed yesterday, so that he might pay his troops and kept intact the imperial forces, was not fortheoming to-day, and it is doubtful if it will be. In that event all the troops in the province will join the rebels.

Reports from rebel sources state that the negotiations between Yuan Shih Kai and the republican leaders at Hankow have been closed without an agreement having been reached. There is no cessation in the fighting and the rebels so far have been victorious. They have crossed the river Han, which separates Hankow from Han-Yang, and have related to the value of the rebels and many of the officers have committed suicide.

perial outposts and the rebel advance guard are engaged. The general assault by the rebels is expected hourly. Reenforcements have begun to arrive near Chinkians, the headquarters of Gen. Hen Ko Ching, and the imperialists are ready to make their last stand in what, it is believed, will be the decisive battle of the rebellion.

Every indication points to a victory for the rebell. They are superior in numbers and are better officered than their adversaries, most of the commanders having had foresten milliary training. They are abundantly equipped with guns, ammuniton, and provisions and horses, and in addition have fourteen gunboats.

Thus, if the first blow had not absolutely knocked him unconscious, the casuing uproar would have brought a dozon persons, who were only a few feet away, to the scene. The first blow haid Mickle helpless at the feet of his assailant; the other blows were delivered with a savage malignity that could only be caused by a cold-blooded determination to get revenge on the part of some individual of an almost animal nature. Thus they reach the half-witted colored man who quareled with Mickle.

This is the brother's story of the quarrel:

He states that he was hurrying for a car when the stranger ran toward him, and, after colliding, apologized, and turned wastward in New York avenue. He watched the man, attracted by his heavily breathing and evident excitement, and saw him enter a public comfoct station. This is the same man who was seen by the man in charge of the station to change a collar hurriedly and go out.

Where this man disappeared to the police cannot learn. Nobody in the neighborhood knows him. He did not enter Mickle's cigar store on the day of the murder or during the week preceding, according to those of the dead man's friends who were present from time to time.

Desirous of learning whether he had left Washington for Baltimore, the police examined the conductor's reports on the Baltimore. Washington and Annapolis Electric Line-the line which the man would most probably have taken. A car passed fifteen minutes after he was seen to enter the public comfort station, but he did not board it. The records show that no passenger climbed aboard until after the car had reached Fifteenth street northeast. Nor did he take any of the succeeding cars.

Fourteen detectives are now making every effort to learn where this man went, "The man with the black mustache," they call him, and they more than half believe he can tell something.
